Historian Vana Carmona - June 6

Nine years ago, Vana Carmona discovered the gravestone of a man named Prince near several of her family's plots. Learning he had been enslaved by her ancestors, she embarked on a historical quest to find others. Soon she found out that enslavement in Maine was more common than she ever believed. Moreover, many of our founding fathers were complicit in the human trafficking from Africa as well. Vana subsequently founded The Prince Project. Today it has evolved into a database of almost 2000 people of color who lived in Maine prior to 1800. The result has been a unique understanding of Maine enslavement, as well as New England that is misunderstood - if not ignored. Vana's goal is to help rewrite the historical narrative of our State and to ensure that the next generation knows the truth about our earlier Maine families. She will be at the Kennebunk Free Library on Tuesday, June 6 at 6:00 to discuss her research.

Vana has done presentations on her work at various local historical societies, libraries and schools throughout the State. In addition, Vana is a docent/guide for several historic sites in the Portland area, including Maine Historical Society and Spirits Alive (Eastern Cemetery). Eastern Cemetery is the oldest public burial ground in Portland, Maine and has two sections of African American graves. She is a graduate of Sarah Lawrence College, and completed her Masters of Liberal Arts (focusing on Medieval History) at California State University/Sacramento.

Nonfiction Book Group - June 12

Join us on Monday, June 12 at 6:30 p.m. to discuss Half American by Matthew Delmont.

"Black Americans played crucial roles in nearly every theater of World War II, but they have been largely ignored in historical accounts. Delmont sets the record straight. Delmont, a professor of history at Dartmouth who has written numerous books on civil rights and Black history, notes that he was surprised when his initial research revealed the number of Black men and women who served during the war: more than 1 million. Due to prejudice among White military leaders, most Black soldiers were assigned roles in construction, transport, supply, and maintenance. Even under appalling conditions, they served courageously, and the final victories in Europe and the Pacific would not have been possible without them. Once they were allowed to serve on the battlefield, they were indispensable. 'The trailblazing Tuskegee Airmen, 92nd Infantry Division, Montford Point Marines, and the 761st 'Black Panther' Tank Battalion served bravely in combat,' writes Delmont, 'and Black troops shed blood in the iconic battles at Normandy and Iwo Jima, and the Battle of the Bulge.' As the author shows in this illuminating history, military training camps were brutally segregated, and civilian Black Americans faced obstacles when applying for jobs in war factories. One reason was the belief that military service would help fight discrimination within the U.S., a concept encapsulated in the "Double V" campaign promoted by Black leaders: victory over fascism abroad and victory over racism at home. Even after the war, little changed for the Black community. Black veterans often found themselves ineligible for the benefits available to their White counterparts, and even Black men in uniform faced harassment. Delmont suggests that the wartime contributions of Black Americans planted the seeds for later progress, although it would be a long, difficult path—and one not yet finished. The narrative is disturbing and painful, but it provides important pages that have been missing from American history. A vital story well rendered, recounting a legacy that

Author Margaret Jones - June 13

On Tuesday, June 13 at 6:00 p.m., the Kennebunk Free Library will host local author Margaret W. Jones as she discusses her book Walking Sacred Sites.

In this deeply personal travel guide, Jones takes readers on extraordinary walks through known and not-so-known places in Ireland, England, Jordan, Wales, and Scotland. With vivid and compelling details, she has these venerable lands tell their own stories by her willingness to be open to their messages. As you travel with her, you too may be curious about your own ancestral connections to sacred landscapes. Whether you are a seeker of unusual destinations or on a spiritual quest, walk with Margaret on hallowed ground, kneel with her before hold wells, and travel ancient Roman roads. Discover the stories of saints, goddesses, and witches. Enter portals and experience what the ancient Celts called “the thin places.”

Margaret Jones, MEd, has a background in social work and education with a certificate in therapeutic storytelling. She is an award-winning storyteller, workshop leader, tarot reader, and travel guide. In her spare time, Margaret performs, writes, and continues her search for sacred places.

Ahoy! On Wednesday, June 21, 2023 at 6:00 p.m., all ages are invited to KFL for a concert by The Shank Painters. Weather permitting, the concert will be held outside the library. If it rains, we will move into the Parson’s Reading Room. Chairs will be available, but feel free to bring a blanket and picnic on the library lawn. Light refreshments will be served.

The Shank Painters are a pirate-themed folk music trio based in Portland, Maine. The band's repertoire consists of Shanties - a variety of mostly nautical classic folk songs with catchy sing-along refrains, beloved by children and grown-ups alike. These works are treasures of history, preserving the travails and spirit from centuries of seafaring culture.

Formed in the Summer of 2016, the band began performing at Portland's First Friday Art Walk and has since performed at festivals, parties, pub crawls, restaurants, and bars all over New England. Bringing together accordion, voices, banjo, and guitar, the Shank Painters bring the past alive with their mixture of playful, rollicking, heartbreaking, and hilarious songs.

Adult Book Discussion - June 27

Join us on Tuesday, June 27 at 1:00 p.m. to discuss The Poacher's Son by Paul Doiron.

"Maine Game Warden fights to clear his no-account father of murder charges in this deeply felt actioner.

Even before his parents divorced, Mike Bowditch wasn't close to his father, and after the breakup, when Jack Bowditch descended into a swamp of womanizing and drinking, Mike had less and less to do with him. Since the last time he saw his father two years ago, he's become a Game Warden—a slap in the face to both his poacher father and his girlfriend, Sarah Harris, who left Mike when she realized he was never going to go to law school. Now Jack's back in Mike's life with a vengeance. Someone has shot Jonathan Shipman, the spokesman for the deeply unpopular corporate purchaser of a 100-year-old campground that's obviously planning to shove the current residents aside in the name of development, and Bill Brodeur, the deputy who was guarding him. Det. Wayne Soctomah is convinced that Jack was the shooter. So is almost everyone else in Somerset County except for Mike and his mother, Marie Turner. Scorning Marie and her second husband, attorney Neil Turner, who go into hiding to avoid Jack, Mike vows to do whatever he can to vindicate the father who's been phoning him for help. His decision leads to a series of disastrously self-destructive actions that Doiron makes perfectly credible, all interspersed with a series of flashbacks to Mike's childhood that are both tender and chilling." - Kirkus Reviews

The results for this month's Would You Rather question are in! In March, we asked, "Would you rather explore the bottom of the ocean or space?" In the Children's Room, 31 friends wanted to explore the bottom of the ocean, while 31 friends would prefer to explore space. 39 friends just couldn't decide and voted for both. At the adult circulation desk, 18 friends would like explore the bottom of the ocean, and 17 friends would rather explore space. 5 would like to do both. In total, we had 49 votes for exploring the bottom of the ocean, 48 votes for exploring space, and 44 votes for both. It's a tough question, and the closest vote we've had to date with the ocean winning overall by one vote! Which would you choose? Keep an eye out for next month's question and vote for your choice upstairs or downstairs!

Speers Gallery

June Artist: Elizabeth T. Schoch

The Japanese concept of wabi-sabi -- which celebrates that which is imperfect, transient, aged, or incomplete -- is the theme of the June exhibit at The Speers Gallery, located on the lower level of the Kennebunk Free Library, 112 Main St., Kennebunk, Maine. "Wabi-sabi: Finding Beauty in the Imperfect," is an exhibition of photography by Maine resident Elizabeth T. Schoch.

"The idea of wabi-sabi resonates with me," Schoch explained. "Wabi-sabi encourages us to see beauty in the imperfect. It reshapes our expectations of what beauty is. I view my subjects as perfectly imperfect."

"Wabi-sabi: Finding Beauty in the Imperfect" runs from June 1 through June 30. The public is invited to an opening reception on Saturday, June 3, from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m.

Schoch, a self-taught photographer and artist, is a retired writer who resides in Biddeford. She is the author of The Everything Digital Photography Book (first edition).

Schoch's photos and gelatin prints have been on display at various venues in Southern Maine, including Engine in Biddeford, Brick Store Museum Holiday Shop in Kennebunk, Fa-Fa Gallery in Portland, and Dyer Library in Saco, among others. She is a regular participant of the monthly Reader's Choice group at Kennebunk Free Library.

Kennebunk Free Library is pleased to display the works of this talented artist.

The public is invited to view the exhibit in the library's Speers Gallery from June 1-30 at 112 Main St., Kennebunk, Maine, during regular library hours when the gallery is not in use for library programs. Please check the library website for current hours and gallery access, www.kennebunklibrary.org.

A Message from the Library Director

June is always an exciting month. School is just about over, the weather is warming up, and at the library, the Summer Reading Program (SRP) holds its kick-off! This year, on June 26, we are having a 60s Dance Party. This event serves as an indicator that our SRP isn't all about reading. Over the years, SRP's have evolved to include the many ways in which people learn, which can include books, but also programs and social gatherings as well. Additionally, SRP's aren't just for kids. There are also great activities for teens, adults, and families too. I hope to see you there.

In Transit: Being Non-binary in a World of Dichotomies by Dianna E. Anderson

Want to better understand what non-binary people experience in our society? I can't improve on the Goodreads review (including a 5 star rating): "For decades, our cultural discourse around trans and gender-diverse people has been viewed through a medical lens, through diagnoses and symptoms set down in books by cisgender doctors, or through a political lens, through dangerous caricatures invented by politicians clinging to power. But those who claim non-binary gender identity deserve their own discourse, born out of the work of the transsexual movement, absorbed into the idea of transgender, and now, finally, emerging as its own category."

Poetry Unbound: 50 Poems to Open Your World by Padraig Ó Tuama,

This book did open a whole new world for me. The author also hosts a podcast (Poetry Unbound) with The On Being Studios. He is from County Cork, Ireland and has the most delightful accent (KFL has this book on cd). Both a poet and a theologian, Padraig takes one poem from anywhere in the world, reads it, talks about it, and then reads it again. I love this new interest.

Embrace Your Space: Organizing Ideas and Stylish Upgrades for Every Room on Any Budget by Katie Holdefehr

This little book is geared toward small spaces, making the best use of what you have and how to make judicious changes to make the space work for you. Hints on decluttering, adding that pop of color and tweaking the kitchen to cater to your lifestyle. Allows a non-apartment dweller to peek into the lives of tiny living.

Ian, Library Assistant

I've been in a bit of a reading slump lately, with the weather being so nice in the afternoons and the NBA playoffs on the tv in the evenings. Still, I've been able to make a lot of time to read to my daughter, so this month's recommendations are some of our favorite children's books that we've read in the past month. Jon J. Muth's Stillwater books are calming, insightful, and beautifully illustrated. Our favorite is his newest: Stillwater and Koo Save the World. Effie has also really enjoyed reading Can I Be Your Dog? and I Found a Kitty by Troy Cummings which was suggested to us by Maria. These sweet books are written in the form of letters (which I recently found out is called an epistolary....you never stop learning) and feature a dog named Arfy. We are a family of animal lovers and stories of animals finding homes never fail to make an impression on us. Finally, Effie has really enjoyed the series of Amy Wu books by Kat Zhang with illustrations by Charlene Chua. She picked out Amy Wu and the Warm Welcome somewhat randomly after seeing it on this month's Asian American and Pacific Islander Heritage Month display in the children's room. As a parent, I'm so grateful to Maria, Aspen, and Maggie for highlighting diverse books in our collection.

We also took out Making a Meal for a Fairy by Ruth Owen, part of the Mythical Meals series. These are small cookbooks centered around fantasy creatures that can be a fun way to start cooking with a younger child. Here's Effie with our finished "Fairy Frappe."
