Former Tomb Guard Reveals History of Arlington National Cemetery

Tom Tudor, a former sentinel at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery, will present a talk about the history of the Cemetery and the Tomb and his service there on Saturday, May 21 at 2 p.m. The talk coincides with Armed Forces Day, an annual holiday that celebrates military members and their service.

Tudor's presentation, "Arlington and the Tomb of the Unknowns," traces the cemetery's history from 1669 to the present, as well as the history of the Tomb, which was established in 1921. Tudor served as a sentinel, or Tomb guard, and then as a relief commander at the Tomb from 1969 to 1970. He is now president of the Society of the Honor Guard - Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and is a member of the organization's board.

The Society works to raise awareness about the Tomb and provide support for past and present guards. It's a vital mission, Tudor said. "Many young people today do not know about the sacrifices that have been made on our behalf. The Tomb exemplifies the ideals of service and sacrifice that have allowed our nation to thrive and prosper," he said.

Arlington National Cemetery and the Tomb are important reminders of the sacrifices made by members of the military, according to Tudor, who has been delivering presentations about the Tomb for 25 years. The cemetery receives more than 4 million visitors each year, and the Tomb has its own special history and traditions, Tudor said. For example, the marble used at the Tomb is from Yule Quarry, near Marble, Colo. - the same quarry that supplied the marble for the Lincoln Memorial.

And, Tudor added, few Americans know that the Tomb has been guarded 24 hours a day since July 2, 1937. "Prior to that, the Tomb had been guarded only during the daylight hours that the cemetery was open to the public," Tudor said. "In 1937, it was discovered that people had been coming into the cemetery at night and chipping pieces off the Tomb for souvenirs."

There have been close to 700 Tomb guards since 1921. Guarding the Tomb is a special honor and responsibility, Tudor said. "To stand alone with the Unknowns at midnight with a full moon overhead is an experience shared and understood by very few," he added.

Tudor is an entrepreneur, five-term Rotary International Club President, and board member of the Pikes Peak Area Rotary Endowment. He lives in Colorado Springs, Colo., with his wife, but frequently can be found traveling around the country to deliver talks on Arlington National Cemetery and the Tomb. lawyer based in the Kennebunk community and receive information about free resources, low-cost legal assistance and legal referrals. This event is free and open to the public. Please call for reservations.

The goal of the day is to provide Maine citizens with access to legal advice and information so that they are better prepared to face legal issues that arise. Legal access is critical to a community's well-being; an entire community suffers when neighbors and friends go through foreclosure, are not safe in their homes, or cannot afford heat or food.

"Access to justice is about fairness," explains Hon. Andrew M. Mead, Associate Justice of the Maine Supreme Judicial Court, "so that, regardless of your income, you have access to our society's system of justice. When we say the Pledge of Allegiance, we close with the promise of 'justice for all.' If individuals lack access to legal assistance, it profoundly affects their lives, the lives of their children, and the stability of their communities."

Organizers of the series are the Maine Justice Action Group Collaboration on Innovation, Technology and Equal Access to Justice (the Collaboration) which includes Maine's public libraries, the Maine State Bar Association, the Maine Bar Foundation, the State of Maine Judicial Branch, Maine's legal aid providers and other organizations interested in helping people access the legal resources they need, all working under The Maine Justice Action Group.

Local Author Presents Talk on Overcoming Severe Shyness

Kennebunk author Helen Rivas-Rose will host a talk about overcoming severe shyness disorder - and launch a statewide awareness campaign -- on Wednesday, May 18 at 6:30 p.m. The author of Brave: A Painfully Shy Life and the founder of the non-profit Severe Shyness Support, Rivas-Rose will share her story and information about severe shyness disorder. The event is the kick-off for Rivas-Rose's Severe Shyness Awareness Campaign, which will include a number of educational programs throughout the area.

Rivas-Rose says she was "closeted by shyness for decades." Born in Connecticut, she spent her adolescent years on Prince Edward Island. Later, too fraught by social isolation to stay in one place, she traveled continuously, from Madrid to Caracas and Calgary to Lisbon before moving to a family compound in Kennebunk. There, a feeling of desperate isolation encouraged her to seek professional help.

Since then Rivas-Rose has spent two decades recovering from severe shyness. In 2015, she launched the nonprofit Severe Shyness Support with a mission to raise awareness about severe shyness disorder and help encourage shy people to seek help so that they can live life fully.

Her talk will include information about new research on shyness. "When I was a child, and for many years since, people believed the best policy to help a shy person was to leave them alone," Rivas-Rose says. However, a 2014 study by Erin O'Connor at NYU found that creating a safe, respectful environment for shy children better supports their development.

Severe shyness disorder is not recognized yet in the latest edition of the Diagnostic Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, and because of that, Rivas-Rose says it is difficult to track how many people suffer from the disorder. However, she says that experts estimate between one in 20 and one in 30 people live with the disorder.

"Because few, if any, of the severely shy were treated as children, it is probable that many live among us as adults - as I did until I was 50," she says. "I want the general population to know what severe shyness is, and how difficult it is to overcome. At the same time, I also wish to reach the severely shy themselves and encourage them to seek relief."

Rivas-Rose's 2015 memoir, Brave, about her struggle to overcome shyness, received rave reviews and a number of awards, as well as an endorsement from Dr Philip Zimbardo, one of the world's leading authorities on shyness. Information about the book and the Severe Shyness Support group is available at shynessbook.com. Copies of the book will be available for sale at her talk at the library.
